Triana Energy Recognized For Efforts To Assure Environmental Stewardship

CHARLESTON, WV, May 1, 2010 - Triana Energy, LLC announces that its Environmental Health and Safety programs have been certified under ISO-14001 and OHSAS-18001. The independent registrar making the declaration was Det Norske Veritas (DNV); one of the original signators of the ISO standard process.

These international standards recognize excellence in management systems and the promotion of a culture of continuous improvement. The standards are established by the International Organization for Standardization and are recognized globally among industry leaders.

According to Henry Harmon, President of Triana Energy, the Company pursued registration to “assure that Triana will continue to lead the industry in stewarding and protecting the human and natural resources involved in developing the energy our nation needs.”

Triana Energy, LLC was founded in 2006 by executives of the former Triana Holdings, LLC, which owned and operated Columbia Natural Resources prior to its sale to Chesapeake Energy in 2005. In June 2009, Triana announced that Morgan Stanley Private Equity had invested in the Company, allowing an expansion of its Marcellus strategy.
